GOP Aides Reportedly Had Fund for Bugging

By Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 (WP).

-Funds for the Watergate espionage operation were kept in a special account at the Committee for the Re-election of the President under ... ie control of the principal assistants of former campaign manager John N. Mit-chell, The Washington Post has learned.

The Mitchell assistants, all of whom still bold pulley-making positions on a high level in President Nixon's re-election campaign, were among 15 persons who had access to the secret fund of more than $300,000 earmarked for sensitive political projects.

Included in those projects was the espionage against the Democrats, for which seven persons, including two former White House committee at this time has used aides, were indicted Friday by a federal grand jury.

It could not be learned whether the Mitchell sides, who include persons who once worked at the White House, knew that funds specifically would be used for the purpose of illegal electronic surveillance. However, associates said, the aides were aware that the money would be spent generally on gathering information about the Democrats.

A spokesman for Mr. Nixon's re-election committee, informed of the Post's story, said yesterday that 'there have been and are cash funds in this committee used for various legitimate purposes such as reimbursement for expenditures or advances on travel. However, no one employed by this

Texans Will Hold Trade Fair In World Ports on Big Liner

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 17 (NYT). —The Queen Elizabeth 2, one of the world's largest luxury ships, has been booked for an unaccustomed 1974 journey by businessmen from Texas.

The Texans will convert the liner into a floating trade fair and, for two months, the ship will visit African, Middle Eastern and European ports to promote sales of Texas products.

Plans for the 60-day fair were announced by the Texas Industrial Commission, R. J. Tuttle of International Enterprises, Inc., and James Rooney of Cunard Lines, after the commission had approved the plans.

Chester Wine of Corpus Christi, commission chairman, said that the exposition would enable major industries represented in Texas to display their products in ports that represent vital markets in U.S. international trade.

Booths on 6 Decks

More than 500 exhibition booths will be set up on six decks. The public rooms on the ship will become industrial pavilions and the staterooms and suites will bouse many of the exhibits.

A scaled-down Astrodome—the domed stadium in Houston-will be built on the top deck to house exhibits. An oil drilling rig will be set up on one of the lower

Mr. Tuttle said that the venture would cost an estimated $14 million, to be borne entirely hy the industries that participate. Large exhibition booths will cost a company about $40,000, a fee that will include two suites for exhibition personnel and all food costs. Smaller booths will cost about $25,000, Mr. Tuttle said.

Locrative Markets

The cruise will cover "the most lucrative markets in that part of the world," Mr. Tuttle said. The tentative itinerary includes North Africa, the Soviet Union, Greece, Italy, Portugal, the Netherlands, England Turkey Romania, Yugo-slavia, Spain, France and Germany. Three days are planned in each port. Mr. Tuttle said that contacts with the Soviet Embassy had been good and that a visit to the Soviet Union was approved. The port of call would be Odessa on the Black Sea. The trade cruise will begin with conversion of the Queen Elizabeth 2 in New York, where crews will embark on Oct. 15, 1974, on a three-and-a-half-day trip to Galveston, Texas, to erect the ex-

Frederic V. Malek, the deputy campaign director whose responsibilities include both the drive and the volunteers needed to carry it out, discussed earlier last week some of the reasons this will be a "major thrust" on the campaign.

First, "the President has annormced he is not going to do a great deal of campaigning," and second, the role of the media has been downgraded. This was already evident in the recent transfer by Mr. MacGregor of more than $3 million previously earmarked for media to the recruitment and registration drives.

in serious condition.

A military spokesman said the sniper in the Creggan area hit the soldier in the stomach, but he managed to fire back Later, the body of a man was brought to a local hospital. The army said it assumed the victim was the sniper.

Witnesses in Larne said the gunbattle crupted when an estimated 500 Protestants launched an attack with gasoline bombs and stones on the Catholic St.

The witnesses said hostility between the town's police force and Protestants began hullding up when a Catholic reserve member of the force told UDA men marching through St. John's Place yesterday to disperse.

A Protestant mob began gathering in the district last night and shortly after midnight started hurling stones and gasoline bombs at Catholic homes in the area, the witnesses said. Yesterday, a former Northern Ireland government official told a Protestant rally that more guns should be given to the public to shoot IRA bombers and gummen. John Taylor, minister responsible for security before Britain suspended the Protestant-dominated government in March. added: "The only way to defeat the sneaking bomber is to have more people armed who will be ready to fire if they see the IRA planting a bomb."

Pawns in the Game

American prisoners of war arrived in Hanoi (along with assorted American opponents of the war and, surprisingly, some memoers of the press; they were all predictably hustled off to an air-shelter-predictably because that was the purpose of the visit from North Vietnam's point of view.

There was no raid. The Pentagon and the White House may have some strange ideas about the efficacy of bomoing, but they are not such fools as to drop high explosives on this particular group—or anywhere in their vicinity. For, like Hanoi, Washington has been using the prisoners of war as pawns in a chess game played with Fischer-like psychological ruthlessness on both sides.

No one can blame the relatives of freed prisoners for being happy over the release of those they love, or showing gratitude to those who released, or helped to release them. So far as they are concerned, it probably makes little difference whether the North Vietnamese are making propaganda profit of a gesture, which does little toward solving the basic issues of the conflict, and which really stems from Hanoi's refusal to abide by international rules concerning prisoners of war. Nor are they, probably, particularly impressed by Washington's disparaging comments on the scope of the prisoners remaining in North Vietnamese

When the family representatives of two limbo, as so many hundreds still arc, will be freed to return home.

For the North Vietnamese, the release of three men costs little and can possibly bring large dividends when the party returns to the United States to tell of cowering in shelters while American planes, however mythical, ranged overhead. It may even convince some that the acceptance of Hanol's terms might mean the instant release of the rest of the prisoners.

This has been one of the chief sources of political argument in the United States: Must this country keep up its intervention to secure freedom for the captives, or is an end to that intervention the only means of doing so? If the United States were firmly accepting the idea that prisoners of war are only one of the items of human cost in a war that has killed so many and destroyed so much, this could hardly be the case. But since the judgment of the nation is that the war itself was at hest a mistake and at worst a crime, the individual prisoners have become symbols of what was lost and what might still be salvaged.

Hence, North Vletnam, the administration in Washington and the opposition have united in playing the prisoner-of-war issue for all it is worth to them, regardless of what suffering this means for the prisoners gesture as compared with the totality of and the families or how it may confuse the broader questions. Meanwhile, the only sane hands. For them-and for most of their attitude will be to rejoice when the three countrymen-the simple fact is that three are sent out of their captivity-and view men, who might have been killed in the with extreme skepticism the collateral pioys fighting, as were so many thousand young and propaganda, from whatever source, Americans, or who might have been held in that may accompany that act.

Trading With Moscow

Reports of new progress in trade negotiations with Russia and China sharpen the question of whether the United States should put human rights issues, such as the harsh new Soviet "education tax" on wouldbe emigrants to Israel, on the table, too. Senator Ribicoff, a leader in earlier congressional efforts to end tariff discrimination against Communist countries, now says that such discrimination should not be ended and other trading concessions should not be granted until the education tax is taken off. "If it is appropriate to link trade issues with political objectives," he says, "it is certainly just as appropriate to establish a linkage (with) the overriding moral issues

We find the question real and difficult. It is easy only to establish its extremes. On one side, trade plainly cannot evolve in a vacuum, either political or moral. But neither can trade be ilnked to attaining satisfaction on every political and moral issue. The differences in Soviet and American interests and values are so many and significant that to await satisfaction would preclude any trade at all.

In setting appropriate limits, two standards ought to be applied; a third will be applied, regardless. First, is the Soviet action a gross violation of human rights? All too many Soviet practices-trampling on cultural nationalism in Lithuania and the Ukraine, abusing writers, for instance—qualify under this standard. Second, is the offending action within the reach of remedy by the United States or private Americans or other foreign partles? Third-and this is the standard that will he applied in any event-how much effective leverage can be brought to bear? Unquestionably, in our judgment, the new education tax constitutes a gross violation of human rights, and it is a matter on which Kremlin decision could be affected by outside pressure. Moreover, political leverage, the thrust of it emanating from the American Jewish community, is being put on it. It is precisely because the cause is just and because there is some reason to believe the Soviets are vulnerable on it that we believe the application of political pressure to be justified in this instance.

We realize that this does not dispose of the broad Issue of improving ties with a government many of whose values and ways are alien to those of most Americans. The issue did not have to be faced while Soviet-American (and Chinese-American) relations were tense and limited; It will have to be faced now. Given the overarching American interest in the conventional, political and economic benefits of detente, the case for slowing down the process for the sake of one or another human rights issue will always tend to be an uphill one to make. It would be nice if, by virtue of increased contacts with the United States or internal evolution, the Soviet Union were to "mellow." But there is little evidence on which to expect such a transformation. On the contrary, in terms of human rights, the Soviet Union has probably gone hackwards over the last 10 years. Khrushchev's successors have not followed his example and loosened controis: they have tightened them.

It remains the fact that, however compelling the elements of conventional national interest, conscience and decency assert an irrefutable claim for an influence on official policy. Joet how that claim will be defined and expressed will-must-be debated. But it cannot be denied. Better relations with the Soviet government do not imply and cannot require a sacrifice of American

Sino-Japanese Ties

The most surprising thing in the agreement that China and Japan are preparing to sign is the rapidity and scope of the rapprochement between the two countries which had been ingoring each other since the end of World War II. It is an accord between Asian powers. To be sure, the will for hegemony on the continent is bound to pit the two countries against one another somer or later. Presently, their common eagerness to push aside the non-Asian powers as well as economic necessities prompt them to agree by taking bold initiatives which the rivalry between China and Russia facilitates. Nixon dealt out the cards unexpectedly, but who can tell what will result from that new deal—especially in Asia.

It was the 23rd victory of the season for Romniel, a record of which any pitcher may be proud. It's a great season for him, even if the A's aren't going anyplace this year.

Soviet Jewry: 'A Justified Measure'

By Vladimir Katin

MOSCOW.-A decree has been of reasons, mainly on family on "reimbursement by Soviet citizens taking up permanent residence abroad, of state expenses on their education." This decree has caused a preconceived attitude in some countries. What then is the meaning of this measure?

From now on, persons leaving the USSR. to take up permanent residence in capitalist countries must repay the expenditures incurred by the state in providing higher education or other highler levels of training for specialists and scientists. This measure is assessed by the Soviet public as a just and justifled one directed against the drain of public money to other countries,

The point is that Soviet citlzens get their higher education free, that is, at the expense of the state. Besides, students and postgraduates are paid state scholarships, which have been largely increased as of Sept. 1. In senior years, for instance, the scholarships are equated with state-fixed minimum wages and salarles. All in all there are 811 higher educational extablishments in the country, with a total student body of about five million.

Great Expense

The system of higher education in present-day conditions requires large capital investments -for the construction of institu tions of learning, student hostels, libraries, laboratories, the purchase of equipment, the pay of professors and instructors. year the Soviet state has allocated a total of 3.5 billion rubles. or $4.2 hillion, for higher and specialized secondary education

In spending these huge sums on the training of highly qualifi-ed specialists for the national economy, the Soviet state, quite understandably, expects that these specialists use the knowledge gained for the good of their country. Therefore there is nothing unnatural about the state reserving the right to demand the refunding of expenses when Individual persons leave the coun-

Restrictions apply principally to those with a certain military training or who hy nature of their work are employed on johs with a national security risk

In this connection it would be to the point to tell that the number of citizens of Jewish pa-tionality wishing to leave the U.S.S.R. for Israel is very insignificant

Thus, over the entire postwar period approximately 21,000 people have emigrated from the Soviet Union to Israel, that is, less than 1 percent of the Jewish population in the country.

The Applications

According to Soviet Ministry of the Interior figures, the following numbers of applications to leave for Israel from Jewish-nationality citizens were registered by the beginning of March of this year: 285 in Moscow, 50 in Leningrad, 119 in Kiev, 124 in Moldavia. An opposite development is also in evidence-many of the former Soviet citizens of Jewish origin, upon arriving in Israel, experience disappointment and ask to be permitted to return to the Soviet Union. I personally met and talked in Vienna with dozens of such families fleeing from Israel and asking the Soviet Embassy to help them go back to the U.S.S.R.

Obviously there is the need to take special note of the circumstance that the new arrangement for going abroad apply in absohitely the same way to all Soviet citizens without any exceptions, whatever their nationality. The new decree adopted by the Presi-dium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet deals with Soviet citizens in general, not with some particular nationality.

It is believed in the Soviet Union that the new arrangements for citizens going abroad have been prompted by the logic of life by the Soviet state's concern for the interests of the entire peo-ple. Not preventing private in-dividuals from taking up permanent residence abroad, the Soviet state at the same time has no intention of acting as philanthropist toward them and to the capitalist countries where they

the new decree is to preserve public money and to protect the rights of those who live in the Boviet Union and want to study and work in their own country. Incidentally, obligatory reim-bursement of the educational cost in state-run higher educapayment of benefits received from the state, when moving to another country, has long become an international practice. These measurer exist in many countries, for example, in France. Sweden and so on. This is fully in sccordance with Resolution 1,243 of the 1970 UNESCO General Conference which directly addressed itself to the members of UNESCO to undertake the measures necessary to restrict the encourage-ment of scientists and specialists

Thus, the principal meaning of

But, the Games did go on.

The Main Issue This is the main issue in the election-not who wins, but what, The President can win the elecwithout peace in Vietnam; hut he cannot govern the country effectively without a lot more peace and trust at home. Winning and governing are two tinuing these Games after they have been rendered meaningless or, is the definition more in quite different things. It is quite possible, and this year even easy, to win by opposing the militant blacks, the young political extremists, the liberated women, and the people who are cheating on the welfare system, all of whom frighten a great many Americans who are troubled hy the rush of change.

But to govern, after you win is to me you have to deal with the poor, and the young, and the blacks, and the continuing war and killing in Vietnam. You can win by playing off the races and the generations against one another. It is easier to overwhelm the militant poor at home and in Vietnam than to persuade them, but we cannot get that "generation of peace" the President talks about by destroying Vietnam, devouring our children at home, or separating the races.

I have never seen a more pre-fessional political campaign in a presidential election than Nixon's this year, or a more unprofessional campaign than McGovern's. The Republicans, Mr. Stans, are supposed to be noblesse oblige amateurs, but you have used every trick in Jim Farley's book, and this is just the problem. In the way you are defeating Mc-Govern, you may easily defeat the President's ability to unity and govern the nation in the next four years, for the campaign is not leading to peace, either in Vietnam or at home, not encouraging law and order, not reconciling the races and the generations, but embittering them, and generals waging private bombing raids on North Vietnam against the public policy of the President, the next indictments against former members of the White House staff for illegal political espionage at the Democratic Committee's headquarters, the day after that testimony about conflicts of interest on grain deals with the Russians and campaign contributions from the milk lobby after mysterious decisions about how the government raised the price of milk. But we get no adequate explanation of all this from the President or the Department of Justice or anybody else who has the power to get the facts, and the President rejects the notion of a special board of inquiry.

Even powerful and self-righteous men like John Ehrlichmen in the White House make disgraceful personal charges of bias against newspaper critics who happen to have family ties to McGovern, and the President, who has much to defend and the ability to defend it, leaves his defense to califiret officers and press agents, who then hide behind "executive privilege" when they are asked by the Congress or the press to explain their

The Lavelle Affair

During the Day, Unauthorized Targets, And at Night, Falsifying the Reports

By Seymour H. Hersh

WASHINGTON (NYT). - The case of Lt. Gen. John D. Lavelle and his private air war reached the Senate Armed Services Committee last week, with one immediate casualtythe concept that the highest-ranking military or civilian authorities have ultimate command and control over the air war in Vietnam.

Meeting in closed session, the Senators-some of them reportedly shaken by what they heardlistened to a sergeant and other members of an Air Force unit in Thailand describe how more than 200 pilots and senior officers spent their days hombing unauthorized targets in North Vietnam and their nights faking classified reports to cover up what they had done.

The military witnesses said that for more than six weeks early this year the falsified reports were routinely sent to higher headquarters in Washington and elsewhere to guide military planners. Another set of honest reports was sent covertly to the Southeast Asia. Whether they went elsewhere is as yet unknown to the Senate investigators.

The Senators also heard Gen. Lavelle, the Air Force commander, who was dismissed in March and demoted for allegedly ordering the raids, describe in intricate detail how he had received permission for some of the raids—in advance —from two of his superiors. Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, and Adm. Thomas H. Moorer.

Adm. Moorer is the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and General Abrams is the much praised former Vietnam commander, whose Senate confirmation as Army Chief of Staff has been held up by the hearings. They both heatedly denied the charges. Gen. Abrams made his denials during testimony Wednesday before the committee. The unauthorized air raids took place over a five-month period that began in early November, 1971, and ended in March, well before the current all-out bombing ordered in response to the North Vietnamese offensive by President Nixon. At the time, the official Nixon administration position was that bombing attacks began while the secret peace talks in Parts were still going on, were officially reported to the press by the military command in Saigon as "protective reaction" -that is, as assaults made in response to North Vietnamese activity.

Under the rules of "protective reaction" that were in effect late last year, U.S. planes could counteratiack if North Vietnamese missiles or antiaircraft batteries opened fire, or if the radars controlling those weapons "locked on" the aircraft.

Most members of the Armed Services Committee, a group that normally can be described as promilitary, made it clear in talks to newsmen last week that they were ready to vote for Gen. Abrams's confirmation as Chief of Staff-polling that may take

Mr. Stennis told reporters that he was not ready to cast his vote yet for Gen. Abrams, "I'll wait until the hearings are over," he in Lacs and South Vietnam.

New Radars

The bull of the unauthorized Air Force missions actually began more than two months later Jan. 23-after the North Vietnamese began using a sophisticated new radar system that made it difficult for United States fighter pilots to determine that enemy radars were "locking on" and preparing to fire. Gen. Lavelle testified that both he and Gen. Abrams agreed that the activation of the new radars was enemy action that called for "protective reaction." Over the next six weeks, at least 20 missions were staged—few. if any, aimed at the radar systems themselves, a clear violation of the rules of engagement. The raids ended on March 8, about two weeks after a 23-year. old sergeant from Udorn, Lonnie B. Franks of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, wrote a letter of complaint to Sen. Hughes that triggered the ultimate upheaval. On his part, Gen. Abrams-the immediate superior above Gen. Lavelle—acknowledged during his testimony that he had discussed the new radar and the bombing of North Vietnam many times with his chief Air Force deputy, but said he bad no idea that the raids, which he knew about, were staged in violation of the rules of engagement.

Convincing

The four-star general, in testimony that many senators later said was very convincing, did acknowledge that he had participated in the planning for an air attack in early January on one of the new radar sites. The mission was quickly observed in Washington and termed a violation of the rules of engagement the Joint Chiefs of Staff. which is supposed to monitor all operations in Southeast Asia, Gen. Abrams testified that after the complaint, ha ordered an end to such raids.

It was this kind of testimony, along with an admission from Gen. Lavelle this his superiors in Washington and Honoluln had criticized the first unanthorized raid in November-not for violating the rules, but for missing the targets that obviously disturbed Sen, Stennis as much as tha revelations about the lowerechelon cover-uns

How the 'Ants' Manage to Keep Defying the Bombs

By Tad Szulc

WASHINGTON (NYT) .-- Every morning, seven days a week, the White House receives over the signature of Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird a detailed report on the bombing of North Vietnam in the preceding 24 hours.

Known in the Washington intelligence community as "Laird-grams" and marked "Top Secret -Eyes Only," these reports come with color maps on which strikes by B-52 bombers are represented hy red squares and hits by fighter-bombers by red dots. Since the United States began its massive bombings last April, these maps look as if North Vietnam was covered with a large blotchy rash, Last Sunday, for example, there were 320 strikes; on Monday, 300.

Aerial photography and pilots' reports, likewise forwarded to Washington, attest to the superb accuracy of the bombing, what with laser beam, radar, television and computer guidance available to American pilots as they roar over North Vietnam-covering the country from the demilitarized zone in the south up to the restricted belt within 25 miles of the Chinese border in the north.

But in recent weeks the Nixon administration has been discovering with growing discomfort and October while the diplomatic mess go about their build-up deconcern that the correlation between the technically perfect bombing and its real impact on Hanol's battlefield capabilities in South Vietnam is considerably less than meets the eye on Mr. Laird's mans.

The Reports

In fact, other top-secret reports reaching the White House-from the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Air Force - provide evidence that despite the relentless bombing of railways, highways, bridges and depots and tha mining of North Vietnamese ports, the Communists not only have been able to keep their in South Vietnam adequately supplied, but also have managed to send down 20,000 fresh troops just in the last six weeks-for a grand total of

According to these reports. made available by intelligence officials last week, the best current estimate is that about 5,000 tons of supplies including weapons, munitions, fuel and lubricants. and food-enter South Vietnam daily. These supplies support Hanoi's present military effort as well as enabling it to prepare new offensives that now are exstalemate persists in Paris-The massing of North Vietnamese troops in the rice-rich Mekong Delta region southwest of Saigon suggests to intelligence officers that the opening of a new major front in the war may be in the offing along with more heavy action in the northern provinces. Hanoi's forces in the delta region have increased 10fold since last March in what for years had been South Viet-nam's most pacified area. The CIA and the DIA concur in the judgment that the Com-munists can sustain the fighting at its present rate for two more years regardless of the bombine. Conversely, the Air Porce thinks that at least two more years of the air war are required to break Hanoi's military back-assuming, of course, that the South Vietnamete Army can hold its own, Intelligence officials emphasize that the two-year estimate is not necessarily maximal but renresents the outer limit of ressonable projections possible at this time. These officials also stress that the bombing is gradually 'bleeding them white. This state of affairs has faced

In the process, PAL and SECAM ecame as familiar to Italians as brands of spaghetti.

Still unresolved was the extraordinary controversy which en-veloped the "experimental" period of color transmission in Italy during the Mnnich Olympic Games. Amid a swirling maze of domestic political infighting, international pressures, bureaucratic hijinks and critical economic factors, no one yet could tell when, how or even if color television would be permanently introduced in Italy, the Western world's largest remaining potential mar-

Of the 11 million television sets in Italy today, only 40,000 can receive color. Almost all of those are in homes in the far north, where viewers tune into color programs from Switzerland and Yugoslavia beamed by transmitters of the West German PAL system. Perhaps 200 sets in the entire country receive the rival

French SECAM system. For six years it has been assumed that Italy would opt for PAL once the government got around to final approval of color on the state-subsidized RAI net-work, which has ample PAL equipment already installed. But in Italy, assumptions are often as precarious as government

Mr. Pompidon Calls

In late July, French President Georges Pompidon came to call on Premier Giulio Andreotti. Their private meeting in Lucca, near Pisa, touched off a storm of rumors, charges and denials cen-tering on SECAM. The official communiqué did not mention any decision on color television, but on Aug. 12, Mr. Andreottl announced that Italy's era of color TV would be inaugurated on an "experimental basis" at the opening of the Olympics, with alter-nating PAL and SECAM transmissions. Informal samplings in Rome showed an overwhelming preference for PAL's color quality over SECAM's, and commentators complained that experimenting with the French system was ridiculous. Faced with a barrage of charges

That falled to camp down the uproar. The largest Catholic weekly in Italy, Famiglia Christiana, obtained and printed what it said was a secret French diplomatic memorandum prepared for the Lucca meeting which offered Rome tempting economic and political concessions in exchange for adoption of SECAM.

These were said to include removal of all planned French restrictions on imports of Italian wines, support for a Common Market regional development fund which would greatly benefit Italy. concessions on various Italian agricultural exports, and estab-lishment in Rome of a Mediterranean electronic research cen-

He also specifically warned Mr. Andreotti not to adopt SECAM over PAL, Mr. La Malfa's ultimatum still stood Monday night despite the government's temporizing moves.

Next came a broadside from within Mr. Andreottl's coalition: Former President Giuseppe Saragat, whose Social Democrats are the second largest partner in the government, declared that the true motive" of the Lucca summit was color television, and he hranded SECAM a "typical product of the French-Soviet policy with Gaullist inspiration."

IF YOU ARE STILL FLYING SOME AIRLINE BESIDES TWA IN AMERICA, THIS IS WHAT YOU ARE MISSING.

When we planned TWA's Ambassador Service, we didn't settle for a new carpet and a lick of paint.

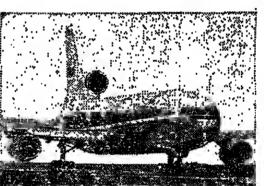

We ripped out the interiors of a whole fleet of planes.

And started again. First we introduced Ambassador Service on our long flights across America.

Then we expanded it to our international nights from Europe to America, the Far East and the Pacific.

And now, we're introducing a whole new service on many of our short business flights in America.

No other airline does so many of

N.Y. Stock Market Continues to be Sluggish, Dow Averages Lose Almost 14 Points in Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 17 (NYT). -The stock market's September song continued this week as a slow-guited dirge, with prices drifting lower. The Dow-Jones industrial average dropped every day but one, losing a total of 13,92 points. It closed Friday at 947.32 Average daily trading aince Labor Day has slumped from 16.30 million shares to 11.80

At midweek the Dow-Jones wire trumpeted the impending American-Soviet trade agreement estimated to be worth $5 billion, and Wednesday afternoon's trading became a spightly Cossack dance. But hy Thursday morning the lively tune faded and the dirge resumed.

Although fears of new tensions in the Middle East had been advanced earlier as an explanation for the market's lethargy, the more durable depressing factor appeared to be investors' concern over the economy and inflation.

Glamour issues, under selling pressure, were among the higgest losers, amid reports that some institutions were shandoning them in favor of stocks with lower price-earnings ratios.

Pressure of high interest rates this week pushed yields on honds for public housing to the highest level in more than a year.

Volume for the week came to 61,550,000. A total of 1,946 issues were traded of which only 523 advanced in price, while 1,327 declined. New lows for the year were registered by 253 issues against 34 highs.

Most active stock was American Telephone, which gained 1 3/6 to close at 45 1/2 on a volume of $19,000.

Swedes Tie Canada in Hockey, 4-4

-A goal with 47 seconds left to play by Phil Esposito of the Boston Bruins gave Team Canada a 4-4 tie against the Syedish oational ice hocky team tonight. Team Canada, an all-star selection of National Hockey League professionals en route to Moscow for the second half of an eight-game series against Russia, had beaten the Swedes, 4-1, yesterday. The next game for the Canadians is in Moscow on Friday. In the faur games played in Canada, the favored Canadian squad was humbled by the Russians, losing twice, winning once and gaining a tie. It was more humble pie tonight, as the Swedish team, while a power in amateur bockey, was not rated on a par with the Russians, much less the Canadians. Vic Hadfleld of the New York Rangers scored first for Team Canada, at 10:30 of the first period. But the Canadian squad suffered from penalties, as Bill Goldworthy of the Minnesota North Stars got a total of 14 mlnutes, including R 10-minute misconduct penalty, at the end of il:e first period. Larz-Goeran Nilsson scored for Sweden 1:12 into the second period, but Don Awrey put the visitors back into the lead on a slap shot from the blue line at

Tord Lundstroam scored Sweden's second goal after 3:16, but only 16 secoods later Rick Martin of the Buffalo Sabres put Canada shead again, 3-2-

Hans Hansson equalized score for the third time Sweden after 7:09, 3-3, and then Inge Hammratroem scored to give the home team its first lead after 11:16 minutes.

Although Hadfield was serving a major penalty, Esposito broke through and made it 4-4 with only 47 seconds left.

"The boys need a rest today before we start the final proparations for the trip to Russis." Team Canada coach Harry Sin-

Sinden was not satisfied with his teem's performance but sald that "the referees prevented us sometime fram daing our best."

"But it was a good thing to see how European referees act. Now we know how it might be in Moscow," he said. Haddleld's penalty, only six minutes from the end, was for hitting Swedish team captain

In the most sensational deal of the first session of the 1972 World Team Olympiad, North-South were able to make a grand slam with a combin. high-card count of 22. Very few pairs reached even a small slam, how-

When the Aces held the North-South cards against Japan, the Japanese players were canght in a doubling rhythm. West opened a rather light hand with one spade, and optimistically rebid two spades after North had a take-out double and South had responded two diamonds.

Bohhy Wolff as North then jumped to four hearts, thinking that hearts would prove as effective a contract as diamonds, He was wrong about this, and East was also wrong in thinking that he would defeat four bearts, NORTH East doubled, and this contract would have been made exactly. However, Jim . rooby as South bid five clubs, perhaps forestalling his partner's retreat to five diamonds.

West doubled this quite reasonably, but East was now suffering from the delusion that his opponents were in trouble and doubled five diamonds.

Jacoby had no trouble in making two overtricks. He won the opening heart lead in dummy, drew trumps in two rounds ending in dummy, and persevered with hearts. The sixth heart was eventually established, so he made four heart tricks, eight trump tricks and one spade trick for a score of 1,150.

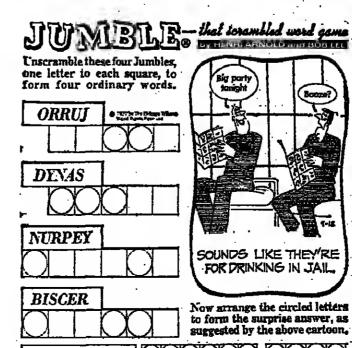

In the replay the Japanese North-South never managed to bld diamonds. North bld four hearts over the one-spade opening, and was doubled by East, West retreated to four spades, and was permitted to play that contract undoubled, going down two tricks. The Aces gained 1,050 points, or 14 IM.P.s on the deal.

THE BREAST

By Philip Roth. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 78 2

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haus

THE trouble with Philip Roth's new novella reminds me of a playwriting teacher I once had -a courtly old gentleman (long since deceased) named Lemist Esler, whose modest claim to immortality was the anthorship of a movie called "Whistie at Eaton Falls," which used to show up on The Late Late Show from time to time. Mr. Esler was a strong believer in certain fundamental rules of story-telling he felt he had discovered in a long career of writing and teaching, and one of the most fundamental of them was that you couldn't make your hero too passive. I once proposed to him the idea of a play about a young man who decides, in Act One, to spend the rest of his life in bed. "Too passive," was Mr. Esler's carefully considered response. "What are you going to do with your man after he goes to bed?" I bring up this recollection here because you might say that the hero of Philip Roth's story is just as passive. "I am a breast," confesses David

Alan Kepesh tragically, after he has described the harrowing evening when his body began to undergo certain disturbing altera-tions. "A phenomenon that has been variously described to me as 'a massive hormonal influx,' 'an endocrinopathic catastrophe, and/or 'a hermaphroditic explosion of chromosomes' took place within my body between midnight and 4 a.m. on February 18, 1971, and converted me into a mammary gland disconnected from any human form, a mammary gland such as could only appear, one would have thought, in a dream or a Dali painting. They tell me that I am now an organism with the general shape of a football, or a dirigible; I am said to be of a spongy consistency, weighing in at 155 pounds (for-merly I was 162), and measuring, still, 6 feet in length. Though I continue to retain, in damaged and "irregular form, much of the cardio ascular and central nerv-ous system, an excretory system described as 'reduced and primitive -tobes now help me to void -and a respiratory system that terminates just above my mid-section in something resembling a navel with a flap, the basic architecture in which these hu-

You might say that a human breast is passive (unless of course you happened to think of the one that escapes from the sex institute and marauds the countryside in Woody Allen's "Everything You Always Wanted to About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask"). At least the breast in Mr. Roth's story is passive—slung, as it is, like a cheese in a net-bag, in a private room in Lenox Hill Hospital. Indeed, passivity is the crux of the prohlem here, for if Mr. Roth's nightmare has any grasp on reality, it is by the story's reduction to ab-

Republican Paradise

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—The 1973 for Tony Martin. What parapresidential campaign is the to America aince Joe Diniaggio. After years and years in which everything seemed to be going wrong, the campaign began and, ever since then. the world has been getting better every day. To enjoy this startling improvement in life, it is only necessary to forget the existence of George Mc-Govern and con-

Baker centrate on President Nixon, who is, after al!, the President and for that reason. the sensible man to go to for a view of the world. And what a happy world he gives us, day

Consider the dreariness of the situation before the campaign began. Banana republics were refusing to cringe when America frowned. The dollar had been wiped out. Armed lunatics strolled about committing mass homicide. The lights kept going out. Heart disease was spreading. Saturday night was no fun any-

Then the Republicans opened their campaign. Immediately, life began to look hrighter,

The Vietnam war ended almost immediately.

A week later, crime came to a more or less complete halt. The day after that, we all went to the supermarket and found that we could hit more for our money. It didn't feel that way, hut Herhert Stein, Nixon's chief ecocomist, said we would be crazy to helieve everything we felt. Believe! He urged us. Believe and enjoy! We helieved. It had been so many years since there had been anything to enjoy; why shouldn't we have believed?

Miracles began to happen. Young men cut their hair and put on real clothes again and looked just the way young men looked in the good old days of 'Pigskin Parade,' starring Jack Haley and Patsy Kelly, and ran around smiling and singing "God Biess America."

Young women quit calling for encores by unkempt men like Mick Jagger. Now they swooned dise! The way things were going, best thing that has happened it looked as if Joe Dimaggio might turu up playing centerfield for the Yankees almost any day.

Soon America won the chess championship and would hava swept the Olymoics, too, except that Professor Kissinger didn't want to embarrass our good friends, the Russians and the Chinese, by making them look

One day, nothing good happened anywhere in the world and it looked as if Nixon's magic spell had been broken. It turned out, however, that he had just been toying with us, for the very next day we learned that: (1) our property taxes would be cut; (2) the draft would be ended: (3) the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation would go off welfare; (4) automobile prices would he held at their present low levels; '51 air pollution would be abolished; and (6) cars, refrigerators and television sets all across America would stop breaking down.

Next day we learned that taxes would never again he raised.

We celebrated that night. As if hy magic, our long-lost Liherace album was found on the parlor mantel, and as we listened to the kind of music America used to love, the children came in wearing their new flannel stacks and pleated plaid skirts and saddle shoes, and we discovered that they were 20 years

With the dramatic improvement in the economy, the children all got excellent jobs, with good salaries and fine chances of promotion.

Then, the roof stopped leaking "It's a miracle," someone said. But we all knew better. It was just good government of the sort Republicans give you when they are running for re-election.

Yesterday, medical costs went down. The Maffia turned over a new leaf, and a three-way light bulh which had decided to hurn out at our house changed its mind after bearing from President Nixon.

It is beyond wooderful, this return of the old spirit America had long ago. It is ecstatic. If only we could devise some way to prevent Nixon from ever being re-elected so that he could go oo and on running and running, forever and ever.

17,880 Years of Legs Pounded the Streets

By Bernard Kirsch

BENSBERG-REFRATH, West Germany, Sept. 17 (IHT).-Had it really been a mass escape from an old-age home, the chase would have made old men of the purauers. Gray-haired and no-haired men ran through the streets yesterday, continuing their get-away from church bingo, pinociale addiction and hardening of the arteries. Little boys and girls lined the sidewalks and giggled and pointed as the grown men, some at least as old as their grandfathers, pranced about in short pants which showed off their multi-shaped hot almost unanimously spindly legs. Ambulances and oxygen tanks, strategically situated, did not go to waste as the last of the ancient marathoners came suffering home six hours after he started his health trip. What funny games grown people enjoy.

"Sometimes, they're called a hunch of crazy lunatics," said the wife of a 58-yearold athlete. For the six days prior to the marathon, she had watched her husband, the man she married, switch from a highprotein diet to a high-carbohydrate diet, just like Norwegian skiers do before a Nordic expedition.

What is crazy to some is a way of life to others, and chasing their youth is often the favorite pastime of older meu. "Except most of the men here wish they were older," said Don Logan, 58, who can't wait until he's 60.

Some 603 men older than 40, and one as old as 31, gathered here this past weekend in this suburb of Cologne for the "Weltbestenkampfe der Uber 40 Jahrigen Langen-streckenläufer"-the world loog-distance championships for anyone older than 40.

No, It Really Wasn't A Mass Escape From A Home for the Aged

It was the third time these games were held. Unlike the Olympics which come every four years, the veteran championships are held every two. Four years is a long wait for 80-year-old men.

Prizes are given for three age divisions—from 40 to 49, 50 to 59, and 80 and older, and "the older you get, the less competition you have," said Logan, a TWA corporate secretary who runs a marathon a month, trains every day at 5:30 a.m. and inspires jokes hy his wife.

The competitors, some who see the races as a good excuse for a social gathering, enjoyed calling the races "The Senior Olympics," To Mrs. Logan, they were "The Olympics for Old Men."

The program opened with a mere 5,000meter jount, was followed by a 10,000-meter voyage on a hidden athletic field filled with the wives, children, grand-children and great-grandchildren of the veteran Olympians, and all was topped by the 26-mile 385-yard marathon, three times through the city. At least 17,880 years of pairs of legs pounded the streets, (That's 447 participants multiplied by 40 years,)

Bill Andberg, a 61-year-old veterinarian from Minneapolis, had come here with a group of 125 competitors, all belonging to the U.S. Masters-a track and fleld club for senior athletes. The squad had been in Europe for a month and went home this morning-What can top the Olympics?

Bill O'Shea, another marathoner, came from Rhode Island with the compliments of the U.S. Navy, for whom he works as a Catholic chaplain.

For some, the sole idea of the day's gathering was "to see how far you can go." We're past the sge where you get real dedication, said Tim Kelly, who came here from Australia with 46 others who wanted to continue their athletic lives. Mrs. Logan said, "I just hope my hushand finishes still breathing."

He did, as öld everyone else, and even recorded his best marathon time ever; hours 9 minntes 57 seconds, 13 minutes faster than he did in Boston this year. Still, it was almost an hour behind Arthur Warsham of Britain, whose legs were soma 10 years younger. The winning time was 2:24.37. the Olympic victor last week in Munich recorded a 2:12.19.7, but Frank Shorter is only 25.

Running, or jogging, is a fairly new hobby to many of the marathon men, who took up the sport to either lose weight, or just keep in shape, and ended up giving in to the running mania. Logan, at it for six years, is a familiar sight on the streets of Long Island, New York, where oncesnapping dogs now understand him. Andberg never had real problems with dogs, for the "gray ghost" has one course which goes through a cemetary. Arthur Lambert, father of a 9-year-old child, has been running long enough to become president of the German Jogging Association, but all the practice didn't help yesterday as he dropped out at the halfway point. Still, there are not many 81-year-olds who can run 13 miles. Nor have 3-year-old children call him "Daddy".
